PREFACE

THE publication of The Historical Register of the University of Cambridge followed upon a decision of the Syndics of the Press to lighten the ever-increasing bulk of The Cambridge University Calendar by transferring the historical information hitherto contained in it to a separate volume. That volume, published in 1917, contained historical records from the earliest times up to and including the year 1910, the fruit of diligent research on the part of its editor, Dr J. R. Tanner.

Once again the Calendar has grown to unwieldy proportions, and the Syndics of the Press feel that the time has arrived to issue a further instalment of its contents as a separate volume. This present supplement, therefore, carries on the records contained in The Historical Register up to the year 1920 inclusive. In doing so, it follows its predecessor as a model throughout, except on the few occasions when the order employed in the former has been abandoned in favour of alphabetical order; and four sections—Research Students, Honorary Degrees, Diplomas, and The War—were not dealt with in the previous volume. On the other hand, certain sections in the original Historical Register, such as those on University Ceremonies, Costume, and Discipline, seemed to require no sequel.

In order to make this volume as self-contained as possible, indexes to the Tripos Lists, to the winners of University Scholarships and Prizes, and to the holders of University appointments during the period 1911–20 have been included in it.

Public Buildings and Institutions

(See Historical Register, p. 208 foll., where the record is carried up to 1915; this chapter, therefore, deals only with matters occurring after that year)

ARCHITECTURE, SCHOOL OF

No. 75 Trumpington Street was taken over for the purposes of a School of Architecture in January 1920. The building contains a Drawing Office, Lecture Room, Library, the Slade Professor's room, and the office of the Director of Design. Teaching in this subject is, as far as possible, concentrated there.

ARTS SCHOOL

The Arts School, erected on the Mortlock site from the plans of Mr George Hubbard, F.S.A., was completed at Michaelmas, 1911. The building contains a large Lecture Theatre, seated for about 275 students, eight Lecture Rooms of various sizes, a Common Room for Professors, Readers, and Lecturers, and three rooms suitable for small classes and interviews. The rooms are used mainly for lectures in Economics, English Literature, History, and Mathematics.

At the top of the building there is also a large Departmental Library, having a floor space of 2250 square feet. This provides accommodation for the Seeley Memorial Library, consisting of works on History and Comparative Politics; the German Research Library given to the University in 1914 by Mr Otto Beit; English, Romance, and German Departmental Libraries for the use of students reading for the Modern and Medieval Languages Tripos (the University has received from Lord Queenborough the sum of £500 for the purchase of books for the use of students in Italian); the Bendall Sanskrit Library; and a small library of works on Moral Science. The Departmental Library is under the control of a Departmental Libraries Committee.

There is also a collection of mathematical models, which may be inspected under certain conditions laid down by the Special Board for Mathematics.

BIOCHEMISTRY [Hist. Reg. p. 253]

A grant of £65,000 from the residuary estate of the late Sir William Dunn for the establishment of a School of Biochemistry was accepted by the University by Grace of 22 June 1920. For this a site on the Tennis Court Road side of the ground purchased from Downing College was assigned by Grace of 22 June 1920.

It is proposed to establish at Cambridge a Low Temperature Station for research in Biochemistry and Biophysics, the expenses of which will be met by a Parliamentary vote. An offer from the Committee of the Council for Scientific and Industrial Research was accepted by Grace of 19 June 1920.

BOTANY SCHOOL [Hist. Reg. p. 245]

The Professor of Botany received in 1920 from the Executors of the late Edward Shearburn Marshall about 23,000 sheets of British plants contained in dust-proof oak cases. Mr Marshall was a Scholar of Brasenose College and took the B.A. degree in 1881, and was afterwards Rector of West Monkton, near Taunton. He was one of a band of Systematic Botanists chosen by Mr C. E. Moss to contribute to the Cambridge British Flora, was widely known as a particularly keen and able Field Botanist, and was "unsurpassed as a collector of the critical flowering plants both in point of the number of interesting things he found and the care and industry he showed in selecting and pressing specimens of them." The Cambridge Herbarium probably contains the most complete collection of British plants in the world, and as we have for several years specialised in the flora of this country the acquisition of the Marshall herbarium is an event of considerable importance.

Curator of the Herbarium

ELECTRIC POWER STATION

In addition to their special equipments, all the Scientific Departments and certain other buildings are supplied with direct current electricity from a central power station situated near the Engineering Laboratory. The plant is under the charge of the University Buildings Syndicate, and is to be extended considerably.

ENGINEERING LABORATORY [Hist. Reg. pp. 233, 243]

The building of a new laboratory, with two acres of floor space, on the west side of Trumpington Street, was begun in 1919.

FITZWILLIAM MUSEUM [Hist. Reg. p. 224]

By Grace of 9 December 1919 it was agreed that the stipend of the Director and Marlay Curator should be £1000 per annum, as from 1 January 1919; of this sum £300 is provided from the Fitzwilliam Museum Fund and £700 from the Marlay Endowment Fund, subject to a deduction of £200 from the latter in the case of the Director holding a Headship or Fellowship.

FORESTRY SCHOOL [Hist. Reg. p. 253]

On 6 December 1915 Sir Eustace Gurney of Sprowston Hall, Norwich, offered certain farms to the University, in order that the income arising from them might be applied to the encouragement of the study of Forestry in the University. This offer was accepted by Grace of the Senate, 25 February 1916.

PARASITOLOGY

On 23 October 1919, P. A. Molteno, M.A., LL.M., of Trinity College, and Mrs Molteno, offered to the University, through Professor Nuttall, a sum of £20,000 for the building and £10,000 for the upkeep and maintenance of an Institute for Parasitological Research, and this offer was accepted by Grace of 8 November 1919. On 13 July 1920, they offered a further sum of £6000 to meet the increased cost of building. By Grace of 19 December 1919, a site for the Institute was assigned on the ground purchased from Downing College on the south-west side of the central avenue, and parallel to the building of the School of Agriculture. A further sum of £1000 was also contributed by Lady Strathcona from the estate of the late Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal. The building will be known as the Molteno Institute for Research in Parasitology.

Research Students

From 1897 to 1913 Research Students were known as 'Advanced Students.' Of these there were two kinds, one proceeding to the Degree of B.A. or LL.B. by means of Tripos Examinations and the other by means of Certificates of Research. From 1913 to 1920 Research Students proceeded to the Degree of B.A. or LL.B. by means of Certificates of Research only.

In May 1920 new regulations were approved governing the admission and course of study of Research Students, and instituting the new Degree of Ph.D. But inasmuch as no candidate was presented for this Degree until 1921, the new regulations do not properly come within the scope of this volume.

Modern and Medieval Languages Tripos

(See note on p. 180)

(I) or (II) appended to the name of a candidate denotes that he or she passed in Part I or in Part II. The absence of these figures denotes that he or she passed in a Section (i.e. a combination of Parts I and II). The letters f, g, i, r, s, Srb denote that a candidate passed in French, German, Italian, Russian, Spanish, or Serbian in Part I: these letters are appended only to the names of candidates who passed the Oral Examination in the same language. A capital letter denotes that a candidate is placed in the First Class for proficiency in the language indicated. (II Lit.-Hist.) denotes that a candidate passed in the Examination in Literature and History in Part II. An asterisk denotes special distinction.

UNION SOCIETY [Hist. Reg. p. 991]

In August 1914 the Society admitted to temporary honorary membership all commissioned officers of the Navy and Army temporarily resident in Cambridge, and this privilege was afterwards extended to commissioned officers of the Naval and Military Forces of the United States. On the establishment of the Officer Cadet Battalions in Cambridge during 1916, Cadets were admitted to membership, and over 3000 of these became members. The Debating Hall was also placed at the disposal of the Officers Commanding the Cadet Battalions for the purpose of meetings and lectures in connexion with the training of Cadets.

Owing to the War, elections were suspended from the Easter Term 1916 until the Easter Term 1919.

The Union has now become the largest club in the University, having more than 13,000 members, of whom about 2000 are in residence. The management of the Society is almost entirely in the hands of its resident undergraduate members, who constitute a large proportion of the undergraduates in residence.

The War

This volume would clearly be incomplete without some reference to the War of 1914–18. A full historical record, however, of the changes and activities brought by the war into the life and work of the University is beyond the scope of this book, and, indeed, would of itself form a book of no mean size. All that can be attempted here is a brief survey of the whole subject, with references to fuller records, where such exist.

Immediately on the outbreak of war a scheme prepared some two years before for the appointment of Cadets and ex-Cadets of the Officers Training Corps, and of other members of the University, to commissions in various branches of the Army was brought into operation. A special War Committee of the Board of Military Studies was appointed by the Vice-Chancellor to deal with the selection and recommendation of applicants for commissions; this Committee sat daily from 5 August 1914 until the end of February 1916, when the introduction of a new system of training candidates for commissions brought its duties practically to a close. During this period 3432 applications for commissions had passed through its hands, besides numerous applications by members of the University for work as despatch-riders; it had also put forward a large number of recommendations for specialists in particular services, such as censors, interpreters, geographers, and signallers. It was obvious from the outset that the Headquarters of the Officers Training Corps in Market Street would be inadequate, and the Hall and Combination Room of Corpus College were placed at the disposal of the Corps authorities by the kindness of the Master and Fellows. There for the first month of the war the Committee carried on its duties, assisted by a motley staff of voluntary workers—Heads of Houses, Professors, Fellows, undergraduates, and other willing helpers. After various subsequent moves, the Committee eventually settled at the Old Library of Pembroke College, which became also the Headquarters of the School of Instruction and of the Officers Training Corps.

Meanwhile, within a fortnight of the outbreak of war, a School of Instruction had been formed on the initiative of Major H. G. Comber, Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Pembroke College. This was carried on at first unofficially; but in December 1914 orders were received from the Director of Military Training at the War Office for a School to be established on an official footing. The staff was formed originally by officers of the Senior and Junior Divisions of the Officers Training Corps, afterwards supplemented by regular and other officers invalided from the front. The original courses provided instruction for batches of 200 newly-commissioned officers of the New Army, and in July 1915 the scheme was extended to include a similar number of Territorial officers ; the duration of the courses was from four to five weeks. The Colleges in which the officers under instruction were quartered were Pembroke, Emmanuel, Peterhouse, Christ's, Queens', and Corpus. This scheme continued until the formation of Officer Cadet Battalions in March 1916 ; and it should be added that during this period, in addition to the official courses, unofficial classes of schoolmasters and senior school-boys were formed periodically for short courses during vacation. Throughout this time, and, in fact, throughout the war, the University contingent of the Officers Training Corps remained in being and provided military training for many who were qualifying, at first for commissions, and later for admission to Cadet Battalions. The detailed Report of the Board of Military Studies on military work carried out in and in connexion with the University for the period 5 August 1914 to 29 February 1916 was published in the Reporter of 31 March 1916, and is reprinted in the Cambridge University Calendar, 1916-17, pp. 377 foll.

On the formation of Officer Cadet Battalions the staff of the existing School of Instruction was immediately utilised to form the staff of No. 2 O.C.B., with Headquarters at Pembroke and Cadets quartered at the Colleges previously mentioned, and at Downing. The staff of the battalion messed at King's College, where the Provost and Fellows kindly allowed them to share the high table. A few weeks later a second battalion, No. 5, was formed at Trinity and St John's; and in December 1916 a Garrison Battalion (No. 22), for "category" Cadets who by reason of age or otherwise were unable to undertake "general service," was formed, with companies at Jesus and Sidney Sussex Colleges. Two further companies were added a month afterwards, at Magdalene and Trinity Hall respectively, and later a fifth company was quartered at Caius. Westcott House was taken over as an officers' mess, and the Hawks Club was used as a club for the Cadets. Thus during the latter half of the war, with a negligible number of undergraduates in residence, the Colleges took on a fresh lease of life. The Cadets gained much of the spirit of the Colleges in which they were quartered, and the river and the playing-fields saw a revival of old rivalries in new form. The kindness of senior resident members of the University, whether in entertaining, in lecturing, or in acting as cicerones, and the generosity of the Union Society (see p. 200) did much to make the Cadets feel themselves an integral part of the community ; and this feeling was reflected in the readiness of their discipline at the time and in the pleasant memories which persisted in far less pleasant surroundings.

There were other ways in which military activities reacted on the University. In the first week of the war the 6th Division, from Ireland, concentrated at Cambridge. The troops were under canvas on Midsummer Common and elsewhere; but most of the Colleges offered the hospitality of their high tables and Combination Rooms to the officers of one or other of the battalions in the Division, and the General Officer Commanding, with some of his staff, were the guests of Caius College. The Division left for France early in September. It was followed later, during the winter of 1914-15, by the 53rd (Welsh Territorial) Division, which was billeted in the town and in some of the Colleges; this Division fought at Gallipoli in 1915. Caius became the Headquarters of the First Army of home defence, and a succession of distinguished General Officers, including Sir Bruce Hamilton and Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien, carried on their duties there. A training course for Staff Officers was established at Clare in the spring of 1916 and so increased in numbers that a year later the Garrison Cadets in Caius gave place to the Staff Officers, and the whole of both Clare and Caius was eventually occupied by the latter. Many who served with distinction in the field passed through this course, and their work here was inspected at various times by officers of the highest rank and by His Majesty the King. An Officers' Signalling School was formed in Sidney Sussex College in 1915 and continued there during part of the following year. A School for Adjutants was started in the same College early in 1918 and remained till after the armistice.

The 1st Eastern General Hospital left a more permanent mark on Cambridge than other organisations brought into being by the war. Originally formed at the Leys School in August 1914, it was moved within a few days to Nevile's Court in Trinity. Here the cloisters served as wards for the wounded until, in the middle of October, huts erected on the King's and Clare ground provided fresh accommodation for the Hospital. The whole area of the ground, some 11 acres, was eventually covered by the Hospital; and at the end of the war the huts were leased to the municipal authorities as a temporary assistance to the housing problem. The nursing staff was housed in Selwyn College and in Bodley's Buildings of King's College.

The above is a general survey of military activities in Cambridge during the war, in so far as they affected the University. It should perhaps be added here that Cambridge never suffered directly from enemy action, though bombs were dropped in the neighbourhood of Newmarket, at Bury St Edmunds, Hertford, and other places at no great distance, and the sound of enemy aircraft was heard more than once over the town.

It remains to chronicle some of the other means, not purely military, by which the University contributed to the Allied cause. In September 1914 the University offered hospitality and facilities for continuing their studies to the Professors, teachers, and students of the University of Louvain. Although it proved impossible for the invitation to be accepted in the full sense in which it was originally intended, many Professors and others from Belgian Universities did come into residence at Cambridge, and courses of lectures in different branches of studies were successfully organised and carried on. (See Cambridge University Calendar, 1915–16, pp. 371 foll.) It is also interesting to note that the University Press temporarily took over the publication of Le Muséon, a quarterly review of oriental studies normally published at Louvain. A scheme was also arranged in 1916 whereby the University and town in co-operation gave practical assistance to the Serbian Relief Fund. In June of that year some 150 Serbian boys, destitute through the invasion of their country, were brought to Cambridge and lodged at Westminster and Cheshunt Colleges. Some of them were afterwards drafted to other towns in England and Scotland, but of those who remained the majority were admitted without fees to the Perse School, the Boys County School, the Higher Grade School, and the Leys School, where they entered with keenness into the life and work of their schools. Eventually rather more than a dozen Serbians became members of the University, the various Colleges to which they were admitted receiving them either free of charge or at greatly reduced fees.

Of the senior resident members of the University the greater number had left Cambridge by the end of the year 1915. Some were serving in the forces; many were doing Government work, in London or elsewhere, often in positions of the highest importance and responsibility. Cambridge men, normally members of College permanent staffs, were to be found at the War Office, the Admiralty, the Treasury, the Foreign Office, the Ministry of Munitions, the Board of Trade, the Censor's Office, and in other Government Departments. But in the meanwhile the laboratories at Cambridge were not idle. The Medical Laboratories were throughout the whole war doing work, chiefly pathological, in connection with the 1st Eastern General Hospital; research in gas warfare was carried on in the Chemical Laboratory; and from July 1915 to the end of the war the Engineering Laboratory was engaged in making 13-pounder and 18-pounder shells, and more especially in making gauges, for the Ministry of Munitions.

The war itself had witnessed a number of emergency measures, such as allowance of terms and exemption from examinations on account of military service, suspension of capitation-tax, postponement of elections to Professorships, etc., modification of the regulations for University prizes and scholarships, and many others (see University Calendar, 1919–20, pp. 434 foll.). On the conclusion of the armistice in November 1918 further provisions were made to facilitate the admission of ex-service students, and within the next few months the University was already returning to something like its pre-war proportions. By Michaelmas 1919 its numbers had exceeded the pre-war average. A large number of men obtained grants of money from the Board of Education to enable them to take a University course. But in addition to these there were other classes of students whose presence in Cambridge was a direct consequence of the war. Two hundred officers of the American Army came to Cambridge in March 1919 for a 3 months course; they matriculated and joined the Colleges in varying proportions. Four hundred officers of the Royal Navy whose normal course of education had been interrupted by the war arrived at about the same time. They also were distributed among a number of the Colleges, though they remained at first under naval discipline and did not matriculate. Their courses lasted for six months each; the number of officers to a course was later decreased to 140, and it was at the same time decided that they should matriculate. This arrangement was still in force at the end of the period covered by this volume, as was a further scheme introduced in 1920, whereby officers of the Royal Engineers, the Corps of Signals, and the Royal Air Force were seconded for a one-year or a two-years course at the University. It may be said that by the end of the year 1920 all the normal activities of the University had been resumed.

Times.—It is not often that we can make a perambulation with a competent guide to lead us, through a town we know well, and see it as it looked 350 years ago.... The reader must be left to track out for himself in this very satisfactory book the details which appeal to him, he will certainly not find that he has wasted his time.

Spectator.—For the history of Cambridge this handsome work will henceforth be a primary authority.

Westminster Gazette.—Unexpected bits of information, just the little oddities that catch one's interest.

A CONCISE GUIDE TO THE TOWN AND UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE IN FOUR WALKS. Originally written by J. W. CLARK. 7th Edition, 1921, completely revised and reset, with maps and illustrations (some new). 12mo. 1s. 9d. net. Postage 3d.

Notes and Queries.—It counts among the best of English guide-books.
